

Excluded from the Land of Opportunity:
The Chinese Exclusion Act

Hong Zheng

Senior Divison: Individual Website

Word Count: 925

Process Paper Word Count: 288

Process Paper

The Chinese Exclusion Act was not a subject I was aware of despite its significance to immigration policies in the U.S. I felt compelled to dedicate my project towards this subject because of my Chinese roots. It serves as a reminder of the government's failure to uphold their responsibility of protecting the civil rights of the Chinese.

I conducted my research mainly through utilizing ebscohost and taking advantage of my library's interloan system to obtain the books I needed to find the information for my project. I explored legal documents, books, newspapers, etc. I also took advantage of political images and cartoon images to help match my words with visuals. My research mainly assisted in providing me the background context and information needed.

I chose to do a website for my project. I was between doing a paper and a website but eventually decided on the latter, because it seemed like an interesting challenge. Unknown to me, this would be far more challenging than I expected, especially figuring out how to use the NHD website builder. I first went through adding all the backgrounds and labeling the necessities. I then went back slide by slide tediously working and checking, always managing to have some kind of problem with the layout.

My historical argument claims that the Chinese Exclusion Act created a lasting impact on racism, discrimination, and future immigration policies because of the government's failure to protect the rights of the Chinese.

The Chinese Exclusion Act was the first of its kind for America in restriction for a specific ethnic group and on immigration in general. It would become the start and base for future immigration policies.